

Nika "Bubbles" McLaughlin

October 8, 2006 - March 16, 2025

Bubbles McLaughlin 10.08.2006 - 3.16.2025

Bubbles, aka Nika Bean McLaughlin died peacefully early the morning of Sunday, March 16, 2025, during a re-rewatch of season one of "The Good Place" with her parents Dawn & Stirling.

The unjustly brief time we shared with her here on Earth was often hard, typically joyful, and always interesting. She was a loving big sister to Teji, a deep thinker, and a fierce and unyielding advocate for social justice. Bubbles was also an unapologetically weird, dark, and spooky kid. She was and will forever be cooler than any of us. So there is no use trying. Sorry, not sorry.

Bubbles has special magical connections with so many given and chosen family members: all her Auntie, Uncle, and Cousin teams and of course her grandparents, Susan "Bubbie", Ed "Grandpa", Jamie "Grammy", and John "Papa John". Always by her side were her beloved feline protectors, Thrasher and Echo.

Bubbles was a New Yorker, having spent her early years in Washington Heights. She was a proud lesbian and a senior at Evanston Township High School, focusing on digital art. She hated sports, but loved "RuPaul's Drag Race". She enjoyed watching horror movies (the "Scream" franchise was her favorite) and baking shows. She was an expert at photoshop. She made her chocolate chip cookies with brown butter. The circumstances of her life were dictated by her illness, and while it unquestionably brought her pain, she was loud and unapologetic about her disability. [L] [SEP]

She loved both Halloween and her family very deeply, and it was often unclear which she loved more. [L] [SEP]

In time we will have more and better words. For now, may her memory be a blessing. [L] [L] [SEP] [SEP]

Love you all.

Friends and family gathered on Thursday, March 20, at Jewish Reconstructionist Congregation, 303 Dodge Ave, Evanston, IL 60202. Doors opened at 1pm, service began 2pm, shiva was on-site from 3-5pm.

Guests were asked to what was comfortable and made them feel most like themselves, Bubbles always did!

The service may be viewed here:

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations in her name to the Proteus Syndrome Foundation: <https://www.proteus-syndrome.org/> (a very small and mighty group of parents).

BUBBLES' FAVORITE THINGS:

Digital Art, punk stuff, spooky stuff, D&D, Queer stuff, "Stranger Things", Empires SMP, video games, Undertale, Deltarune, Life is Strange, other fandom stuff, Discord (her online friends), My Chemical Romance, Halloween, her kittens Thrasher & Echo, and just cats in general.

BUBBLES' 1ST PERSON ARTIST STATEMENT FOR HER SENIOR A.P. ART SHOWCASE, OPENING APRIL, 2025:

As a person with life-long complex disabilities and chronic illness, my art has always been both consciously and unconsciously an exploration of declaring my personal identities AND those things that bring me comfort. It is unfortunately common for children, teens, and even adults with disabilities to be infantilized or talked down to. Feelings of anger and dissociation from the physical and a need for escape are very real. I have always been drawn to punk fashions and imagery. I wear devil horns, add pentagrams and other occult images to my clothes and art... this is one way that I can demonstrate both in my art and style that I am not to be Fucked with. And at the same time, I am someone who NEEDS to find any bit of joy and comfort in accessible ways. When I started to struggle with my swallow, I found some catharsis in binge-watching baking shows, researching recipes (oh, so many opened tabs...) and creating digital drawings of my aspirational baked goods. In my work you'll see this merger of the dark with the comforting

"Who doesn't love a delicious pop-art donut with cat ears and goth details?" - Dawn Ravine (Mom)

My persona itself is a coping mechanism in a way, created to be this representation of the real/idolized version of me, who's just trapped inside this broken vessel of a body. She is me, the real me to its full realized potential.

BUBBLES WAS GIVEN A SPECIAL JOB BY HER 10th GRADE CIVICS TEACHER, THAT OF SHARING A QUOTE TO THE CHAT AT THE START OF EACH CLASS PERIOD, TO BE READ ALOUD TO THE ROOM. THESE ARE THE ONES SHE SAVED:

“People ask me, “Have you tried yoga? Kombucha? This special water?” And I don't have the energy to explain that yes, I've tried them. I've tried crystals and healing drum circles and prayer and everything. What I want to try is acceptance. I want to see what happens if I can simply accept myself for who I am: battered, broken, hoping for relief, still enduring somehow. I will still take a cure if it's presented to me, but I am so tired of trying to bargain with the universe for some kind of cure. The price is simply too high to live chasing cures, because in doing so, I'm missing living my life. I know only that in chasing to achieve the person I once was, I will miss the person I have become.”

— Alice Wong, "Disability Visibility: First-Person Stories from the Twenty-first Century"

“Crip time is time travel. Disability and illness have the power to extract us from linear, progressive time with its normative life stages and cast us into a wormhole of backward and forward acceleration, jerky stops and starts, tedious intervals and abrupt endings. Some of us contend with the impairments of old age while still young; some of us are treated like children no matter how old we get.”

— Alice Wong, "Disability Visibility: First-Person Stories from the Twenty-first Century"

“What I have found much harder to let go is the memory of my healthier self. With each new symptom, each new impairment, I grieve again for the lost time, the lost years that are now not yet to come. This is not to say that I wish for a cure—not exactly. I wish to be both myself and not-myself, a state of paradoxical longing that I think every person with chronic pain occupies at some point or another. I wish for time to split and allow two paths for my life and that I could move back and forth between them at will.”

— Alice Wong, "Disability Visibility: First-Person Stories from the Twenty-first Century"

“And sometimes focusing on what you can control is the only way to lessen the pang in your chest when you think about the things you can't.”

— Elizabeth Acevedo, "With the Fire on High"

“The world is almost peaceful when you stop trying to understand it.”

— Elizabeth Acevedo, "The Poet X"

“ To Dawn, Stirling and family,

I pray the almighty God comforts, strengthens and surrounds your whole family with his love during this difficult time. Nika was part of our Kingsway family for about 7 years, her nurses loved working and caring for her. She was one of us, and we are so grateful to have been part of her life. It is still very difficult to grasp and accept the fact that she is gone. She was so courageous, she overcame so many obstacles and we were always hoping and praying for a miracle. I know she is resting with the angels now, and at peace. Please accept our condolences. Bubbles will forever be in our hearts

“ I didn't have the privilege of meeting Bubbles but have learned about them from their mom, Dawn, over the years. I extend my deepest sympathies to Dawn and her family for this profound, heart busting loss. What an amazing family you were for Bubbles and what an amazing daughter they were. I now need to watch the Good Place as I've never seen it. I will think of Bubbles as I watch.

“ As I said in my response to the obituary in the Roundtable, I did not have the pleasure of knowing Bubbles, but this obituary makes it very clear that not knowing them was a profound loss. I hope that we can all learn from them to revel in the abilities we have, whatever they may be, to celebrate every day we have, and to use our strengths to make a difference. If only we all embraced life as fully as it sounds like they did, this would be a very different world. My deepest sympathy to the family, and to our community, for this terrible loss.

“ I wish I had gotten to know more about Bubbles, and meet them more as well. The 1st time I met Bubbles was in my animation class, through Zoom. She made a really cool animation about an egg that hatched into a creature that I wish I remembered, but I have the feeling it was a flying cat. It wasn't until the Senior Showcase, when I was actually able to meet her. Even though I got to see her the one time, I'm still grateful that I had that opportunity. And after reading all of her interests and what her favorite fandoms were, I wish I had of had the chance to have a conversation with them. Not only do they share the same interests as me, they just seemed like a super cool person! Bubbles was such a cool person to see, and even though I missed my chance to really talk to them, I'm still glad I got to attend the virtual Zoom earlier today to support her very loving family, and friends. Thank you Bubbles, for being creative, and confident. Your art is the best!

“ Thank you for bringing your parents home and helping all of us build this amazing community around you and your friends. I will miss your fierce energy and take no crap attitude, which you had the first time I saw you as a 5 year old. Fists clenched and not ready to back down from any injustice, so undoubtedly you every day of your life. You are the strongest and bravest person I have ever had the privilege of knowing. Omg, and the fashion! The art! The stories and jokes! It's all there. Your energy, spirit, and memories will live on. Thank you for touching our lives. We love you, Bubbles. We will take good care of your family.

“ I never met Nika in person – clearly my loss. Still, I got a sense of her strong spirit through her “Grandpa,” my dear friend and honorary brother, Ed. Woven throughout the many stories that Ed told about his times with her, stories that were sometimes sorrowful, sometimes joyful, sometimes triumphant, and always human; the love and admiration he felt for her made her a real person in my life. So, her passing is a personal loss for me.

Listening to Ed talk about Nika also gave me a sense of how a family can come together in difficult times, and how that bond can strengthen each member in coping with emotional pain that seems otherwise unbearable. I know that Ed, and the other members of Nika’s family, always made her needs – and the needs of the rest of her family – a priority.

I wish Bubbles’ entire family consolation, mutual support and peace. May your grief be gradually and increasingly softened by gratitude for having had the gift of knowing this amazing person.

“ Death seems like too final a word for someone who had and will continue to have such a vital presence and strong influence in the lives of those in her family and beyond. I had never met Nika, but, over the years, listened to many stories from Jamie, her Grammy. Their journey with Proteus Syndrome was neither simple nor straightforward and certainly had its share of bewilderment, fear, disappointment, despair, sadness, and tears. But Nika and her undaunted supportive family faced challenges head-on with spirit, love, grace, humor, and style. While there were serious concerns, there were always humorous or inspiring stories of how everyone was experiencing life with Nika, the bright star with out-of-this-world spirit. I always got the sense that Nika was in the right family -- parent, sibling, and grandparent-wise -- and that they were all there for her, radically, relentlessly, thoughtfully, lovingly, and gratefully. Nika was lucky to have them, but they were lucky to have her, too. Know that you are all in my thoughts, Leslie Peoples Leonard

“ We at Lincoln Girl Scouts troop# 41036 loved having Nika with us for our many adventures. Nika designed their own custom stuffed animal (see picture below), and was very specific in clear in their expectations of the final product :) I love seeing the unapologetic artist and person they became. Their Artist's statement and shared quotes were profound, devastating, and affirming. They will always have a special place in our hearts.

“ There's a lot I want to say, but one specific thing I wanted to speak on is bubble's inspiring creativity. I remember eagerly looking forward to long playdates of drawing comics and writing stories. I always felt very inspired by bubbles' art and ideas. They always knew what was funny or what expression to draw or how to color or what cartoon to reference, and working with them always felt so special, like being let in on something much cooler than what I had ever experienced before. They were truly operating on a creative level far beyond that of the world around.

Much of how I understand comics and drawing as an art form comes from bubbles, and I am so grateful for that.

“ I met Bubbles in kindergarten. Me, Bubbles, and Rosie formed a close-knit circle. We spent our childhood surrounding a TV, playing Minecraft and fighting over who got the player one controller for the Xbox. My fondest memories are those at Bubbles house, never have I ever felt as authentic, creative, happy, and free, and I attribute that to Bubbles. Bubbles will always be the most authentic, mature, and creative person I've ever know, even at a young age she was always the most responsible when Rosie and I would try and get into some stupidity she would be a beacon of responsibility but somehow also fun and adventures. Although our time together was brief, I will carry your authenticity, attention to detail, kindness, and creativity through my life. Your spirit will live on through the lives you have touched. I love you so much, rest easy Bubbles.

“ McLaughlin family, on behalf of myself and Bubbles' entire ASL class, we send our condolences to your family. It was such a blessing to have met Bubbles this year and have her learn sign language. She was such a generous, positive, and hard-working student. I was always blown away by her creativity and ability to add her flair on everything she did. I personally enjoyed our moments of connection each class time. She is already greatly missed. We are sending so much love your way.

“ I met Bubbles in freshman year. We were math partners in geometry. I remember confiding in each other about not knowing how to properly solve for  $x$  and bonding over art. It's hard to put into words how seeing Bubbles over zoom brought me joy every class, but I'll try my best. Knowing I had someone in class who shared interests with me was an immense comfort. I had more genuine conversations with her through the chat than anyone else in that class. It felt like an honor the first time she turned on her camera and we spoke face to face.

Two years later we had cartooning together. Sometimes she would share her screen to show us what she was working on.

The last time I saw her was last years art showcase. It was the first time I met her in person. We didn't get to talk much, there was a lot going on, but I complimented her on her style and hair.

Bubbles is such a kind, funny, and creative person. When I got the news I stopped cold in my tracks. I don't know if I'll ever meet another person so authentic and unashamed of who they are.

We'll all miss you, Bubbles. Every life that you touched became better, even if just a little bit. Let us know how close Doug Forcett got it, okay? ❤️🎵🕸
